▶▶ Photoshop Design Showcase

When we think of Photoshop, many of us think graphics and Web design. It's true that Photoshop is an integral part of the design industry, but did you know that it is also an important tool for medical facilities, crime labs, and engineering firms around the world? NAPP members reflect this variety of Photoshop work, ranging from photographers, designers, researchers, engineers, and hobbyists (who simply enjoy the power and creativity of Photoshop). With Photoshop, they not only have the power to spark our imagination but to solve problems for future generations. Here in the NAPP Photoshop Design Showcase, we like to let members show their stuff.

To have your work considered for publication in the Photoshop Design Showcase, please submit samples of your artwork to: fnelson@photoshopuser.com

▼ Gary Ferster

Gary is an independent San Francisco Area digital illustrator/retoucher/ animator/trainer who initially was a self-taught airbrush artist. After discovering Photoshop in 1989, he abandoned his airbrushes for the airbrush tool. "It's amazing and fun to continually apply the learned skills of traditional airbrushing to an electronic medium with a program like Photoshop."

He has created artwork for Web sites, CD-ROM applications, textbooks, magazines, newspapers, packages, posters, and toys. Gary has been beta-testing Photoshop for Adobe for many years.
